Social Security

The President's Social Security Proposal Poses a Risk to Americans of All Ages.

President Bush's top domestic priority is to change Social Security forever. His plan would partially privatize social security. On December 16th in Washington, the President said Social Security is in "crisis." In response, he would turn part of the system over to Wall Street. But the system is not in crisis -- the government's own analysis found that even with no changes, Social Security could pay the full benefits originally promised until at least 2042, and pay very substantial benefits thereafter.

No matter what your age, this change affects you. Privatizing Social Security, even partially, would make retirees and others less secure and would add at least $2 trillion to our national debt. Benefits to future retirees - seniors, the disabled and surviving children - would be reduced by more than 40%, even if they did not choose to trade their guaranteed benefits for private accounts. We have a responsibility to meet our obligations for current retirees and to ensure that Social Security is there for our children. I want to know your views. Please join me on Saturday, February 19th.
